John -

Apologize for the delay. I just heard back 10 minutes ago. The office involved still considers [REDACTED] and will not approve their use. I know this is not the answer you had hoped for. I will get additional background on the decision from them tomorrow to see if there is any remaining hope -- though the response today seemed definitive. Sorry.

Since it's been nearly 2 weeks since my last missive, I thought I'd give it another shot. Is it still stuck at the originating office? John

John -

You are not being a pest and apologize for the delay. The issue is before the front office of the directorate involved (and has been for some time). I have (again) asked for a response on the matter and will let you know immediately upon receiving it.

Hello all,

(b)(3) NatSecAct

In your January 17 letter, you stated you were still awaiting word from the relevant office about whether to grant my appeal regarding redactions made on my manuscript [redacted]

For the reasons I gave at our meeting, I would really appreciate being able to [redacted] In any case, I would like to have this final issue resolved as soon as possible so I can provide a final, approved manuscript to my publisher.

(b)(3) NatSecAct

As always, I appreciate your efforts.

Best,
John Rizzo
